. Chair Report .

Hello NRIG Members!

Happy New Year! I hope you all had a restful holiday break. Welcome to 2021! A new year and a new decade!

The board has been busy this past fall organizing educational webinars for our members. In October we heard from Dr. Amy Wright, Dr. Melissa Northwood and me in conjunction with the Nursing Students of Ontario Interest Group (NSO) on Research Opportunities during nursing student's undergraduate degree. If you were unable to attend the webinars in person, feel free to view the presentations by way of our website.

We want to hear from YOU! If you have a suggestion or idea for a webinar, please give us a shout at nrig.chair@gmail.com. Also, if you'd like to share your research study, findings or research-related activity, we are inviting potential webinar speakers to also reach out to us. This is a fantastic way of disseminating nursing knowledge and research and mentoring novice nurse researchers.

We are nearly ready to launch our spring awards and scholarships program where we are awarding $12,000 to nursing students and nurses. You can expect us to be offering New Member Awards and Undergrad Awards alongside our annual scholarships and grants. This year we are pleased to offer the inaugural Innovation and Dissemination Grant for "point of care" staff nurses who are interested in implementing research into their workplaces. Nurses are natural innovators and problem solvers, and we want to support their ability to promote the uptake of nursing research into practice. Additionally, we are proud to offer dedicated funding to support BIPOC nurses in their research goals. We are very excited for these new opportunities to support nurses in research. More details are available throughout the newsletter, and, as always, access our website for more information. Our primary objective here at NRIG is to support nursing research, and we look forward each year to financially supporting the innovative and important nursing research being conducted across the province! Please spread the news to your friends and colleagues that applications for these awards will be available soon. Keep an eye out on our website, Twitter (@RnaoNrig), Facebook (RNAO Nursing Research Interest Group), and Instagram (rnao.nrig) sites, and through RNAO email.

Finally, there are a number of board positions up for re-election this year. You can find more details in this newsletter. We're looking for engaged and innovative nurse researchers and nursing students to become involved in the board. This is a fantastic way to build leadership skills, network with other nurse researchers and leaders across the province and boost your CV! Keep an eye out for a call for nominations, coming early April 2021.

Wishing you all a fantastic winter semester and looking forward to seeing you online at our webinars and AGM.

Sincerely,
Charlene Ch, RN, PhD
NRIG Chair

•Research Webinar •

On October 29, 2020 NRIG and the Nursing Students of Ontario Interest Group (NSO) were pleased to offer the webinar- NRIG/NSO Research Opportunities- presented by our very own chair, Dr. Charlene Chu past-chair, Dr. Amy Wright, and our past NRIG Member-at-Large-Social Media, Dr. Melissa Northwood.

The webinar focused on how nursing students could access research opportunities during their undergraduate degree. We shared insights into how students can best frame their CV, roles for nurses in research (RA, PhD, Professors at Universities, QI projects in health care units/places of work) & tips on emailing professors with related research interests to volunteer to participate in their research projects. Melissa shared her experiences as a clinician scientist at Saint Elizabeth's, where she investigates research questions originated from the home care clinical environment with a team of nurse researchers in the SE lab. Charlene and Amy discussed their experiences as nurse researchers at the University of Toronto. The link to the webinar is posted on nrig.ca under education/resources, or you can view it here.

NRIG would like to extend a big thank you to our webinar presenters!

• Social Media Update •

Now more than ever, social media has become an important tool in disseminating information and engaging with the nursing and broader health care community. Through collaborations with other RNAO interest groups like NSO, our Instagram following has grown by almost 95% which we celebrated by hosting our first contest! Through a joint campaign between NRIG x NSO, we were able to engage nursing students and award an Amazon gift card to our contest winner! This is the first of many contests that we plan to engage our following across social media platforms. In addition to Instagram, our Twitter following has significantly grown as we approach the 700 followers making us one of the largest RNAO Interest Group accounts!

We hope to continue to grow and provide our followers with relevant content while listening to their perspectives and contributions to nursing research. Stay tuned for more collaborations and campaigns throughout 2021!

Sincerely,

Kamika Sylvester, Member-at-Large Social Media

• Scholarships and Awards •

The Nursing Research Interest Group offers financial support in the form of a competitive scholarship and research grants program to members engaging in research. This year we are very pleased to continue to be able to support ongoing research and scholarship of NRIG members. A total of 9 scholarships and research grants will be available to NRIG members.

We are proud to announce the 2021 NRIG Awards, Scholarship and Grants:

Attention: New 2021 NRIG Innovation and Dissemination Grant: 1 x $1500

The NRIG Innovation and Dissemination Grant will be awarded to support “point of care” nurses engaged in evidence-based research, quality improvement and/or knowledge translation projects. Applicants must be a member of NRIG and agree to maintain their membership for two years.

Point-of-care RNs play a vital role in promoting the health of patients, families, and communities. We recognize that additional support is often necessary for nurses to successfully lead and disseminate research innovations within their practice settings. As such, we are thrilled to expand our awards program this year with the addition of the New NRIG Innovation and Dissemination Grant, valued at $1500! This grant will provide funds to small-scale initiatives that aim to promote the uptake of nursing research into practice (e.g., QI projects, development of new/innovative materials and technologies, educational sessions, workshops, and more!) to enhance the quality of nursing and patient care. The successful applicant(s) will also have access to additional mentorship from the NRIG executive team to further support the project's success.

Inspiration for the NRIG Innovation and Dissemination Grant was twofold. First, we believe this grant is well-aligned NRIG's objectives to promote evidence-informed decision making and disseminate research to nurses, other healthcare providers, government, and the public. Furthermore, it is the mission of NRIG to continue to grow and engage our members, both in academia and beyond. It is my sincere hope that this new grant will provide opportunities for our current RN members to remain engaged and connected to NRIG, while also offering incentive for prospective members to join us in promoting the value and uptake of nursing research.

Sincerely,

Kylie Teggart, NRIG Membership Officer

• Student Corner •

The student representatives have been diligently working to contact student representatives from nursing schools across Ontario to promote NRIG and engage students in our work. With the pandemic limiting our face to face contact with students and school representatives, we are busy organizing a list of email contacts per nursing school to communicate and engage with students virtually. We worked alongside our social media representative in a weeklong social media campaign in collaboration with Nursing Students of Ontario (NSO) from September 21-25 to motivate students coming back into a virtual semester.

Our biggest plan for the coming months includes a webinar where we hope to engage students in NRIG's mission, and provide students with tangible skills to engage with research more broadly across their careers (i.e., building an academic CV, networking, gaining experience in research). We are also hoping to do a monthly feature of a student researcher on our social media networks. If you would like to nominate yourself or another student, please contact us at nrig.studentliaison@gmail.com. Otherwise, stay tuned and we'll release more updates!

Sincerely, Celia Cassiani and Czarielle De La Cruz, NRIG Student Representatives
